

Scene out

Show honours artistic family

Former prime minister Bob Hawke opened an exhibition honouring Australia's most prolific artistic family on Saturday.

The former owners of Bundanon, the Boyds, have their work on display in an exhibition currently on show at Galeria Aniela in Kangaroo Valley.

A Century of Boyd includes work by several members of the family including Arthur Boyd's never previously exhibited Lost Bride.

For more photos from the opening of A Century of Boyd go to www.southcoastregister.com.au

AUTHENTIC BOYD: Emily Rutherford and Gabby Knight from Kangaroo Valley at A Century of Boyd at Galeria Aniela.

ANZAC SCULPTOR: Among the many guests at the opening of A Century of Boyd at Galeria Aniela in Kangaroo Valley on Saturday is Linda Londish from Milsons Point and the sculptor of the soldiers that guard the Anzac Bridge in Sydney, Alan Somerville from St Peters.

SISTER ACT: Berry sisters Madeleine and Arienna Baard enjoy the magnificent sculptures in the gardens of Galeria Aniela in Kangaroo Valley on Saturday.

BEST OF BOYD: Barbara and Hannah Beasley from Kangaroo Valley at the opening of A Century of Boyd at Galeria Aniela in Kangaroo Valley.

FOR THE LOVE OF ART: Ann and Allan Whatley from Balgownie at the opening of A Century of Boyd at Galeria Aniela in Kangaroo Valley on Saturday.

UPSTAIRS DOWNSTAIRS: Enjoying a drink and the magnificent artwork at the opening of A Century of Boyd at Galeria Aniela in Kangaroo Valley on Saturday is Julianne Cole from Wentworth Falls.

ART FOR ART'S SAKE: Gallery owner Aniela Kos from Kangaroo Valley with former prime minister Bob Hawke at the opening of A Century of Boyd.

BOYD COLLECTION: Helena Boyd from London with Liberty and Jennifer Thompson from Bundanon at A Century of Boyd at Galeria Aniela in Kangaroo Valley on Saturday.

ALL BOYD UP: David Reeve from Woollahra enjoys viewing some of the masterpieces at A Century of Boyd at Galeria Aniela in Kangaroo Valley on Saturday.